

U.S. officials upset over new arms deal

WOLF BLITZER
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Several Pentagon officials privately expressed concern over what they perceived as the President's decision to release sophisticated weapons to Israel.

Officials, generally regarded as hostile toward Israel, the military equipment, the "fuel air explosives" is a devastating effect on the balance of power in the Middle East.

State Department officials, taken by surprise by the decision, were upset. And the State Department's decision, which continued to be a Ford decision.

State Department officials here said that the decision to release the arms to Israel was a "hot and cold" decision, which was taken by the President's personal staff.

help but wonder why the President has suddenly decided to release equipment previously delayed to Israel three weeks before the election. I cannot believe that this is only a coincidence. He charged that the Ford Administration is "hot and cold" when it comes to Israel and that it has used arms shipments to Israel as pressure tactics.

Publicly, the State Department and the Israel Embassy here declined to release details of the exact content of the arms package.

In an editorial, the "Washington Post" called on the Congress, which will receive notification of the arms sales probably early next year, "to look at this one with a steady eye." The newspaper added: "The Israelis should be asking certain questions of themselves. They should be asking why, with their security enhanced by American diplomatic and Arab disarray, they need to keep building an armory which is already the mightiest in the Middle East."

Syndicated columnist Rowland Evans and Robert Novak also complained about the arms deal. "Whatever the political results," they wrote, "the decision to make available to Israel some of the most advanced technology in the American military arsenal has stunned high military officers and divided the Pentagon's top civilians."

Concussion bombs on arms list

By LEE LESCAZE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Concussion bombs which have devastating effect over a wide area and secret heat-sensitive equipment for spotting targets at night are the major new items President Gerald Ford has agreed to provide to Israel, it was learned on Tuesday.

(The report has been characterized by an Israeli source as "a correct" White House, State Department and Pentagon officials were under orders not to discuss the decision to let Israel have these sophisticated items.)

The bomb is called a "fuel-air explosive." At a pre-set height above the ground, it sprouts out a film of kerosene-like inflammable liquid to form a circle as much as 9 metres in diameter.

This circle is then detonated, making a concussion that crushes bodies. If the concussion is not fatal, people in the area are then torn apart by the rush of air (including that in their lungs) to fill the vacuum momentarily created by the explosion. A firestorm follows.

"We think of this not as a weapon, but as a kill mechanism," the U.S. military says in describing the bomb.

The targets of the fuel-air explosive are soldiers in trucks, foxholes and bunkers hidden beneath heavy tree-canopies and therefore not reachable efficiently with other anti-personnel weapons, the film's narrator says.

Peres: Supervision of areas 'welcome'

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Defence Minister Shimon Peres said yesterday he welcomed the Government decision to have the Ministerial Defence Committee look after the affairs of the administered territories (over which the Defence Ministry has direct charge). He said the territories were part of the state's security affairs.

(Prime Minister Rabin on Sunday told the Cabinet he would propose that the Ministerial Defence Committee take on as an additional role a supervisory function over policy in the areas. At the Cabinet meeting, Peres said he had agreed in the past to the proposal. But coming as soon after the violence in Hebron, it would be "wrongly interpreted," the Defence Minister said.)

Peres also said yesterday he was content with the latest arms deal with the U.S., adding, "We are obtaining almost all we asked for."

The Defence Minister was speaking to newsmen at the conclusion of a visit to the Arab township of Beit Sahur, west of Bethlehem. He later visited Ramallah and el-Bira.

Peres said the 12-day old curfew in Hebron was partially lifted yesterday — in the morning and evening — to allow local workers to attend the jobs outside town, mainly in Israel. He said that the curfew would be "gradually lifted" in due time, presumably with the completion of repairs at the Machpela Cave in the Tomb of the Patriarchs, the scene of religious conflicts recently.

Peres denied Arab rumours that changes were being introduced in the internal structure of the Machpela Cave. He said that Moslem leaders would soon be invited to inspect the shrine.

The Defence Minister indicated that restrictions on movement to the nearby Kiryat Arba settlement would also remain in force until the completion of work at the Cave. The authorities were reported to have stopped several attempts by Gush Etzion to stage a demonstrative appearance in Kiryat Arba and also a bid to enter Hebron's Avraham Avinu Synagogue, now being renovated.

Syrians thrust to isolate last PLO positions

By ANAN SAFADI

POST Middle East Affairs Correspondent

Syrian troops stationed on Mt. Lebanon last night made yet another lightning thrust east of Beirut in what appeared a bid to check the Palestine Liberation Organization forces and their leftist allies rather than confronting them in a bloody showdown. The Syrians had earlier advanced within artillery range of the port of Sidon — the last fortified PLO-ist access to the outside world.

The Syrians were reported to have moved ground forces towards the mountain towns of Bhandoun and Alei, the most advanced PLO-ist strongholds on the vital Beirut-Damascus highway which slices Lebanon almost in half. The Syrians, who now control more than two-thirds of Lebanon, were said to be trying to push their mountain forces and those outside Sidon down to the Mediterranean coast south of Beirut in order to isolate the remaining PLO-ist enclaves.

This move would cut off the PLO-ist forces from each other, restricting them to three main strongholds — one in western Beirut, another in Sidon and the third in northern Tripoli.

Observers said the Syrians were unlikely to enter these urban enclaves in order to avoid bloody street fighting. The Syrians were seen to be trying to squeeze the PLO-ist camp into total submission for an unconditional cease-fire with their Christian antagonists, acquiescence to Lebanon's state authority under new President Elias Sarkis, and the ouster of PLO chief Yasser Arafat.

The new Syrian push against the PLO-ist camp has cast a shadow on plans to convene an Arab summit conference on Lebanon at the Arab League's headquarters in Cairo next Monday. Yesterday, there was still doubt about the fate of the conference, to which several Arab states, including Syria, will delegate envoys rather than heads of state.

PLO chief Arafat's appeals for help to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat were seen to be switching the topic of the conference from Lebanon's crisis into the PLO crisis. A leading PLO figure in Cairo warned yesterday that the new Syrian military moves in Lebanon were turning many Palestinians into desperadoes, who may "translate their feelings into acts of despair" — presumably meaning hijackings and other acts of terrorism.

Arab League Secretary General Mahmud Riad yesterday recalled his envoy to Lebanon, Hassan Sabri el-Kholi, after the latter reported his failure to work out a cease-fire "in view of Syria's new assaults against the Palestinians." Kholi had earlier put off indefinitely peace talks which were due to be held in the Lebanese mountain town of Shtoura in the presence of Lebanese, Syrian and PLO representatives. The Syrians have accused the PLO of playing for time, attempting to stall their withdrawal from Lebanon pending the Cairo Arab summit.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Imad Fahmy described Syria's military onslaught on the PLO-ist as a "flagrant challenge" to Arab heads of state scheduled to attend the summit.

Five Arab 'boatmen' are Fatah terrorists

By HURSH GOODMAN

Jerusalem Post Military Correspondent

The five Egyptians who landed on the Tel Aviv beach on Rosh Hashana are terrorists, the army spokesman announced last night. Their names were not released.

The five, he said, are members of the Fatah who were on their way to Israel to organize terror cells in the administered territories and to carry out acts of sabotage in the Gaza Strip.

The Jerusalem Post has also learned that the five gave security authorities information during their investigation which has led to the arrest of people involved in the PLO effort to re-organize in Israel-held territory.

The announcement said that the five had intended to land in their speedboat on the El-Arish coast, but had decided to abandon their attempt after they saw an Israeli naval patrol vessel at sea. They apparently dumped their arms and ammunition overboard and headed for the Tel Aviv beach instead, where they handed out whiskey and cigarettes to curious bathers, until the security forces eventually arrived to arrest them.

The spokesman said that according to information obtained during the inquiry the five had boarded a passenger ship in Tyre, Lebanon, on Thursday September 23. They loaded a speedboat, arms and ammunition onto the vessel, which took on passengers at Sidon and continued to Alexandria. On Friday, the coast of El-Arish and waited (Continued on page 2, col. 1)

Repatriated Red Army gunman commits suicide

TOKYO — Two members of the radical Japanese Red Army were arrested in Jordan and repatriated to Japan last night on charges of having forged passports, but one committed suicide, Kyodo news service reported.

Kyodo said they were Junzo Okudaira, 27, and Toshihiko Hidaka, 31. Hidaka committed suicide on route home, Kyodo said. Police said Okudaira and Hidaka were among the five Red Army terrorists who seized the American embassy building in Kuala Lumpur in August, 1975. (AP, UPI)

Yadlin probe suspended as police, A-G confer

By ARTHUR KEMELMAN

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV — The Asher Yadlin-Kupat Holim investigation was temporarily suspended yesterday, while senior Police officials consulted with the Attorney-General, Prof. Aharon Barak, on the future inquiry, late into last night, in an intensive examination of the investigation record.

The police officials leading the investigation, Nitzav Ya'acov Kadmi, Nitzav-Melchior Benyamin Elzegl and other members of the investigating team (which at times during the past two weeks included as many as 15 investigators) worked all Tuesday night to prepare an interim report for Prof. Barak. The report was to have been presented yesterday morning, but was postponed until 2 p.m.

(Observers believe that the Cabinet will have to decide on Sunday whether to go ahead with the Yadlin nomination, or appoint a new government or deputy governor to take over when incumbent Moshe Sarbar's term expires on November 1. Post political reporter Joshua Brilliant adds. Sources close to the Finance Minister Yehoshua Rabinowitz and Justice Minister Haim Zadok told Brilliant that there had so far been no discussions replacing Yadlin. A source close to Rabinowitz added: "We've got a whole week end to do that.")

(Sunday's cabinet debate on the matter will be based on the report Attorney-General Barak is to present to Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin today.)

Israel Radio reported that Justice Minister Zadok said in Haifa that for the time being the government doesn't have to re-examine Yadlin's appointment. He said that when the cabinet discusses the matter it must consider all angles, but ignore press reports. Deliberations should be based only on the material the Attorney-General submits, Zadok said.

During the morning, investigators questioned Yadlin for the fourth consecutive day. After two hours, the Kupat Holim director-general, who has been nominated by the government to be governor of the Bank of Israel, was allowed to leave the National Police Headquarters Branch in Jaffa. Other individuals called in for questioning yesterday included a former Kupat Holim employee and an individual currently working in Kupat Holim's properties department. Yadlin is not scheduled for questioning today.

According to unofficial sources, the police have no concrete evidence that Yadlin is guilty of any criminal offence. While there may be questions about the propriety of some of his actions, there is no objective evidence establishing that he is guilty of financial misconduct or that he personally profited from (Continued on page 2, col. 2)

"Further arrests can obviously not be ruled out, but there has been no evidence to indicate they have yet occurred," one well-informed source said.

On the streets of Peking, there were no signs of tension or extra security. Many Chinese are believed to have been briefed about the reported arrests, but in the past few days the capital has been noticeably relaxed. However, foreigners saw extra troops near Peking and Tsinghua universities, the leftist campuses where Chiang Ching commands wide support.

So far there have been no reports of reaction from Shanghai, the staunchly radical city which was the four leaders' political power base.

Although his appointment has still not been formally announced, Chairman Hua was yesterday given the sort of press coverage previously reserved for Mao. His meeting on Tuesday with Michael Somare, Prime Minister of Papua-New Guinea, was splashed across newspaper front pages. A smiling Hua was pictured seated, gesturing with his right hand.

Informed Western analysts now believe that the decision to appoint

Hua as the second Chairman of the Chinese Communist Party was taken shortly after Mao's funeral on September 18. At the same time, it was probably decided to make Chang Chum-chiao the premier, they said.

What happened after is a mystery, but some time last week the decision to appoint Chang as Premier was scrapped, and he and the other three Shanghai radicals were put under arrest, the sources added. (Reuters)

Means to cut Vienna drop-out right

Closing Vienna camp, cutting rights suggested by Soviet immigrant group

By SARAH HONIG

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV — The presidium of the Soviet Immigrants Association, in a series of radical suggestions aimed at combating the drop-out of Soviet Jews in Vienna, has proposed the closing of the Jewish Agency's transit camp in the Austrian capital.

Another major aspect of the plan, The Jerusalem Post learned yesterday from reliable sources inside the association, is the cancellation of all immigrants rights to Soviet Jews, and their replacement with a series of loans which would become grants if the recipient remained in the country.

Other proposals include the closing of HIAS emigrant centres in Rome and Vienna, a major change in the structure of visa and absorption procedures, and the establishment of a daily immigrant shuttle from Vienna to Israel.

The recommendations have not been made public yet, but have been relayed to Uzi Narkis, head of the Jewish Agency's Aliya Department. They will also be presented to the "Committee of Eight" — four Israelis and four Americans — currently working on ways to cut the alarming Vienna drop-out rate of Soviet emigrants, which is now around 50 per cent.

The association executive last month authorized the presidium to draw up recommendations to combat the drop-out phenomenon and to improve aliya absorption.

The presidium regards the Vienna stopover as unnecessary, and a major source of problems. The most desirable solution would be direct flights from the USSR to Israel, which certainly are impossible in the foreseeable future. If there were direct flights, all Jews who leave the USSR with Israeli entry visas would come to Israel first.

The presidium proposes, as the next-best solution, the cutting of the Vienna stopover to a few hours, by establishing daily immigrant flights from Vienna. The immigrants baggage should be checked through directly to Israel, the plan proposes.

In Vienna, those who declare that they do not wish to continue to Israel, would have their Israeli visa cancelled on the spot. This, the presidium feels, would reduce the effect that he is en route to Israel, Italian authorities would not allow the drop-out to go to Rome, where most drop-outs today await their visas to North America.

This change, and the closing of the HIAS emigrant centre in Rome, would have the effect of leaving the drop-out entirely on his own. Major changes are also recommended in immigrant absorption processes here. The immigrant should not be made to feel that he is being coerced to stay in Israel, once he sets foot in this country. The association recommends that the Soviet Jew not be pressed to become a new immigrant im-

Drama critic Geis buried in Tel Aviv

JERUSALEM POST REPORTER
TEL AVIV. — Manfred Geis, drama critic and director of "Moadim" play agents, was buried here yesterday. Geis, 69, died Tuesday at Sheba Hospital after a four-month illness. He leaves his wife, Louise, a native of Berlin. Geis started out as an actor. His stage career ended in 1933, when he came to Palestine. He remained an excellent reader of German prose and poetry, a year ago he performed readings from Heine here and in Germany. Geis regularly received theatre performances in the German language press here and abroad. From 1942 he directed "Moadim," an agency established by the late Margot Klausner to handle the publication of plays and the sale of rights.

Bar-Lev warns of 30% C-o-L rise; urges package deal to cut inflation

By YITZHAK OKED

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Minister of Commerce and Industry Haim Bar-Lev yesterday called for everyone — the Government, industrialists and workers — to decrease their demands by half in order to finish 1977 with not more than a 20 per cent increase in the cost-of-living.

Otherwise, he told a press conference, because of galloping inflation, "we can expect an increase of 30 per cent in the C-o-L in 1977." The minister stated that if all sides reduce demands — sort of like a package deal — the government will be able to cut its proposal to raise the Value Added Tax and lower the subsidies. He stressed that inflation has forced the government to initiate the creeping devaluation programme nearly every month, making everything very costly.

He said that he did not believe in increasing unemployment to reduce the economy. He referred to the one and a half million unemployed in England, which does not seem to be helping solve her economic plight. He added that Israel is a country that absorbs new immigrants, and it will be difficult to do so if there is large unemployment.

Yadlin investigation

Kupat Holim transactions, the sources say.

(But Israel Television reported last night that the Police investigation will have to continue for a long time, partly because many leads haven't been examined. It said that Police do not have sufficient evidence to press charges against Yadlin, although there is room to suspect him of having committed a criminal offence.)

Among the more important transactions from which Yadlin or Kupat Holim officials are alleged to have profited are the sale of the Caravan hotel in Sharm el-Sheikh to Kupat Holim by Amnon Barneis; the sale to the sick fund of the medical centre in the Tel Aviv area of Tel Aviv; the sale to Kupat Holim of lands around the Meir Hospital in Kfar Saba; the sale of private Yadlin property in Rishon LeZion; and certain insurance transactions carried out for Kupat Holim. In regard to the last two deals, the name of Yadlin's sister, Sarah Harl, has arisen.

Probe into identity of 'Jewish Beduin' begins

MIGDAL HA'EMEK. — Interior Minister Yosef Burg yesterday ordered an investigation to clear up the origins of the 22-year-old Beduin who turned up here on the eve of Yom Kippur and announced that he had learned he was a Jew kidnapped in his infancy.

The Beduin, known as Abdallah, was yesterday still staying here with Rabbi Yitzhak Grossman, who is known for his work in bringing strayed Jews back to their people. Meanwhile, police investigators went out to the Abu Siah Beduin tribe, which is encamped near Nahalal, to question Abdallah's family.

Dr. Burg, who was speaking to reporters while in Upper Nazareth

He told one questioner that this year the Government approved $14.5b. credit for investment purposes in industry. Half for new plants and the other half to veteran plants to renew equipment and buildings.

Answering a question about reports that he had tried to intervene in favour of Ya'acov Lahav, owner of the Lahav Shirt Company, in a dispute with customs officials, Bar-Lev explained that he heard about the dispute when informed that the company in Beit Shmesh was in danger of closing. The plant's 200 workers had been sent on leave without pay. When he investigated, he learned that raw material needed at the plant was in the port and customs officials were not willing to release it.

"I told the customs officials that if they have anything against the owner, there are legal ways to go after him, but that they should not do it at the expense of 200 workers of a development town," he said.

Questioned about his political future, Bar-Lev said that at present he is only thinking of continuing his present job till the end of the government's term of office. "After that I will decide what step to take," he said.

higher-than-normal prices, with part of the money subsequently being kicked back to individuals involved in the deal.

Only one arrest has been made so far. This was the removal of Kupat Holim accountant-general Meir Kimchi on suspicion of having taken a $150,000 bribe, as the result of a sale by Kupat Holim of property near the Four Seasons Hotel in Netanya. Police, it has been learned, intend to ask for an extension of his remand.

Reporter Yitzhak Oked adds: No minister knew that a complaint had been lodged against Yadlin when the Government approved his nomination as Bank of Israel governor, Minister of Commerce and Industry Haim Bar-Lev told a press conference in Tel Aviv yesterday. In response to a question, Bar-Lev said that the fact that police had not informed the government about the allegations against Yadlin "shows how seriously they took the complaint." It appears, Bar-Lev said, that suspicions "weren't strong or clear" at that time. "Even today it is not clear if the evidence against him is strong and serious."

Later an organisation calling itself the "Eye for an Eye Group" issued a statement claiming responsibility for the raid. The group said they were Zionist militants.

Tel Aviv Marina is opened

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The growth of tourist accommodation in the Tel Aviv region is to be slowed down in the next decade, and most of the new building will be restricted to medium-grade, popular type establishments, Tourism Minister Moshe Kol said yesterday.

The Minister was speaking at the inaugural ceremony of the Tel Aviv Marina. Kol said that by the end of 1985 the Tel Aviv region's share of the country's total accommodation should be reduced from the present 25 per cent to 11.

Referring to the recently-published Master Plan for the development of tourism in the next decade, the minister emphasized that it is necessary to correct the imbalance created in the past by the construction of hotels at the expense of the rest of the tourist infrastructure. (Regatta, Page 3)

'Revolutionary tool' is shown in Haifa

New X-ray gives pictures in depth

By YA'ACOV ARDON

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — A computerized multiple X-ray apparatus that gives pictures in depth of the interior of the body far more precise than conventional X-rays has been developed by Elscint Scientific Instrumentation Company, a subsidiary of Elron. It was displayed for the first time yesterday at a gathering that included Commerce and Industry Minister Haim Bar-Lev, business and banking executives and doctors.

The new apparatus, considered a major breakthrough in medical diagnosis, was developed by Elron and 13 other companies, eight of them in the U.S. It is called "Computerized Axial Tomography scanners" or "cat scanner."

Elscint technologist Haim Zaklad in an article published in the U.S. trade journal "Electronics," describes the cat scanner as "a marriage between a computer and X-ray tube that gives physicians a revolutionary diagnostic tool." In conventional radiology, pictures of the interior of the patient's body are often unsatisfactory because some information may be hidden from view, and often a gas or liquid must be injected into the body to achieve contrast in the pictures. CAT scanning reconstructs a three-dimensional image of an organ with a stunning clarity, achieved by viewing the patient from numerous angles through X-rays.

The apparatus consists of a scanner, a computer and a display system. The scanner travels 180 degrees around the patient's vertical couch, can take pictures at each degree in less than ten seconds, supplying data 180 times for each picture, a total of 32,400 measurements. They are fed into a computer and successively emerge on the display screen with clarity and precision. For normal practice it is enough to take X-ray photos of eight sections at four angles, completed within four minutes with the computer reconstructing the pictures into a three-dimensional composite.

Elscint director Dr. Avraham Shoham and Daniel Inbar, who worked on the scanner's development, explained that the merit of the Israel apparatus is its high speed. It is 2.5 to four times faster than those of its 13 competitors, a pertinent feature in view of the high price of CAT scanners (Elscint's costs $600,000). The higher the number of patients that can use the apparatus, the smaller the cost per diagnosis. A earlier model of part of the Elscint apparatus has been tried out successfully at the Albert Einstein Medical School in New York.

Elscint technologists worked on the project for four years, with a determined spirit during the last 18 months in the hope of entering the competitive market where success depends on quality and timing. Market experts believe that by 1980, some 2,000 units will be sold annually.

Mexico plans big welcome for El Al flight

By ZEEV SCHUL

Jerusalem Post Aviation Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Mexican Government expects at least one Israeli cabinet minister to be on board the El Al plane that lands at Mexico City at the termination of its inaugural flight now rescheduled for November 9.

The flight was originally scheduled for November 2, which is All Saints Day, and the Mexican authorities decided to postpone it so that the arrival could be treated ceremoniously.

According to informed circles here, the Mexicans are proposing that the bilateral air traffic agreement with Israel — only initiated thus far — be signed by the Transport Ministers of the two countries on the occasion of the inaugural flight. Israel's Transport Minister, Mr. Gad Ya'acobi, is expected to be on the flight.

Informed circles here suggested that there may be a total revision of the earlier plans for the inaugural flight and that instead of carrying a very limited number of official representatives, the plane may carry a full-sized retinue to accompany Mr. Ya'acobi.

Labour rules out early choice of next man for PM

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — A Labour Party subcommittee yesterday apparently ruled out an early decision on who will be the party's candidate for the premiership. It unanimously decided that the issue is to be settled by the party's Central Committee shortly before the nominations are to be made.

Party sources said it was impossible to predict whether Premier Yitzhak Rabin or Defence Minister Shimon Peres would benefit by the decision.

However, the move by the subcommittee on party affairs, does not preclude an early agreement being made between leaders on the choice, as Housing Minister Avraham Ofer has suggested.

The group recommended that the 600-member Central Committee nominate the party's candidates for the presidency, the premiership, the chairmanship of the Zionist Organization, and the secretary-generalships of the Histadrut and the party itself. The nomination of the Prime Minister or the Histadrut secretary general would be made in a joint session with the Labour factions in the Knesset and the Histadrut, respectively.

Sharon wants Likud body with binding powers

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — A Likud (right) Ariel Sharon suggested yesterday that the Likud set up a council whose decisions will bind leaders of the four parties which form this bloc.

Membership in the council would be in proportion to the party's strength in the Likud, he told The Jerusalem Post.

(Observers do not believe the proposal will be accepted, primarily because it means the smaller Likud parties would be dominated by the bigger ones — especially Herut.) Sharon, who originally set up the Likud, has made its agreement to unite a condition for his return to Likud activity. If his proposal is — as expected — rejected, he will have to decide whether to run independently or join the Likud on the latter's terms.

Sharon made his proposal in meetings with Herut leader Menachem Begin and Liberal leader Simha Ehrlich. His last meeting with Begin was on Tuesday. Sharon complained that each member in the present Likud Executive "must go back to his own party to check matters out" before a decision is taken. This curbs the Likud's freedom of action, he argued.

(A source close to Begin told The Post that Herut, in principle, favours unity but that current proposals are not being seriously considered. The source explained that the Likud had threatened to leave the Likud if the other factions decide to unite. The Liberal Party does not even want to discuss unity, he said. "Why should Begin beat his head against the wall?")

Sharon will soon visit the headquarters of Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter in Atlanta. Sharon said Carter's campaign office invited him three weeks ago to see how the campaign is organized. He added that he will be visiting as a private individual and is not joining in either the Democratic or Republican campaigns.

M.K. raps fee discount for student helpers

By LEA LEVAVI

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The use of volunteer service as a criterion for a $1700 discount on university tuition is an anti-educational act, Esther Herlitz, M.K. of the Volunteer Services Centre told newsmen here yesterday.

The conference was called in connection with the annual volunteer services seminar to be held next Tuesday in Jerusalem, but much of the conference was devoted to her criticism of the Government's approach to volunteer work.

The agreement signed with the students is but one example of lack of coordination, she said, adding the hope that the Volunteer Services Centre will be represented on the committee which will draft tuition-discount criteria. "Not only is it anti-educational to give people a financial reward for volunteer service, but it will also destroy one of the main foundations of volunteerism, the solidarity between the helper and the helped," she said.

Students at Hebrew University live in Katamon Tet as volunteers, she explained, and now one of the 1,000 residents in the block will turn to one of the 50 student volunteers and say: "So you get $1700 for being here, huh?"

Miss Herlitz announced that next month a one-day-a-week course will open at Bar Ilan University's School of Social Work to train those paid workers responsible for coordinating the work of volunteers in their agencies.

Dutch male suspect may be freed soon

Jerusalem Post Military Correspondent

The Dutch citizen who was detained when a Cypriot yacht was pulled into Haifa port by navy ships last week may be released soon, it was learnt yesterday. Gerrard Dassen was held on suspicion of having terrorist ties. He is expected to be visited by a Netherlands Embassy official this morning.

Dassen is being held under an administrative order.

Train derailed

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — A derailed freight car cut the main coastal railway line last night, interrupting service between Haifa and Tel Aviv, and forcing several hundred passengers to switch trains in the dark.

The freight car, carrying grain, jumped the rails near Kfar Vitkin at about 8 p.m., halting all passenger traffic on the line.

Passengers in trains already en route were forced to get out, walk past the derailed car in the dark, and transfer to the train which had come from the opposite direction, which then returned in the direction it had come.

Railways services, were expected to be restored by this morning.

10,000 non-filers will be called in to divulge earnings

Jerusalem Post Staff

More than 10,000 of the million who do not have files in the Tax Authority will be called in to divulge their earnings, the new law says. The new law will be a running application of the new law on income tax. The Tax Authority will call in all Israel's tax payers, including those who are not registered, to file their tax returns by the end of next April. The new law estimated that about 20 per cent of the 100,000 will have to be owing the tax money. The new law said that 50,000 of the 100,000 were taken from the population register. The 50,000 were taken from the register from whom tax had not been collected. These persons who had done a lot of work, or who had been buying and selling without ever having declared earnings, said most of the work at the end of the year would be done by the Tax Authority. The new law warned the complacent that there would be no shortage of manpower. A well known Government-owned bank, a partly Histrut-owned electronics firm, and various Government and private companies are currently being investigated by the Treasury's customs department for alleged evasion of customs and purchase tax. In reports submitted over the last few months to Internal Revenue Commissioner Moshe Neudorfer, Treasury investigators claim to have found over 100 cases of these sorts of tax evasion — amounting to millions of pounds. According to the reports, in many cases the companies and individuals concerned refused to pay a penalty to the tax authorities rather than take the issue to court and thus make it public. Among the cases mentioned in the report are:

- a government-controlled mortgage bank lately in the news is alleged to have failed to pay £101,000 on some materials it imported;
- book crates brought in by a company connected with the Israel Medical Association are alleged to have contained 675 undeclared recording tapes;
- a well-known electronics and electric-appliances company, partly owned by a Histrut conglomerate allegedly imported goods in the period Jan. 1972-March 1973 without notifying customs then or later. Although the company allegedly promised to enter this in its books, this was not done. The tax evasion here is estimated at £116,000;
- an earth-moving company with strong connections with the Defence Ministry — one mentioned in the latest State Comptroller's report — allegedly imported spare-parts in a Defence Ministry ship without notifying the customs department and used the parts for its own use. Documents proving this were allegedly found in possession of the company's lawyer;
- a government company which occupied the headlines in the last six months allegedly imported gold coins but declared that they were tokens. The tax difference was £18.5 million;
- a company owned by a large Jordan Valley kibbutz has for the last 15 years allegedly imported materials which it declared as materials having a lower customs duty. Last year the tax difference came to £160,000;
- a well-known cooking oil producer which also specialises in soaps and detergents in 1974 declared a smaller inventory than it had. The difference in the value of inventory was £500,000, and the tax £150,000.

RAMAT HASHARON. — Work on the centre court at the $3m. Israel Tennis Centre here will begin within the next fortnight and be completed in time for the star-studded "Grand Prix" tournament starting on May 2. The court's stadium, which initially will have seating for 5,000 persons — extending to 7,000 later — is sponsored by Canadian supporters of the ITC. They have underwritten the project to $500,000, ITC chairman Rubin Joseph told The Jerusalem Post yesterday. Details on the construction of the stadium-court are now being finalized by a group of ITC founders currently visiting Israel — Joseph, Bill Lippy and Joseph Shane, all of the U.S., and Freddy Krivine of Britain. Confirmation of the big prize money "Grand Prix" came this week in a telephone call from Harold Landsberg, another American head of the ITC, to the centre's executive director, Ian Forman. Speaking from Philadelphia, Landsberg said that many of the world's leading men tennis players will compete in the week-long tournament. Besides the stadium, three additional courts will be constructed during the coming months, bringing the total number of all-weather courts to 17. Also included in the building programme are a club room, lecture hall and offices, which will cost $50,000. The centre was officially opened last April by Lea Rabin, wife of the Prime Minister and patron of the complex. Meanwhile, the Israel Lawn Tennis Association's annual international championships and Succot junior tournament are being played off at Ramat Hasharon this week, with both events continuing until Saturday. The internationals start at 2 p.m. today and the youth events at 9 a.m.

Hard water is a threat for heart

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The "harder" the water, the less the risk of contracting heart ailments, according to a study by the Ichilov Hospital's conclusion at the annual Israel Ecological Association week at Tel Aviv. The study said that in Eilat, where the water is "harder" than in the country, heart ailments were less common. The study revealed that certain elements in "hard" water may play a role in the heart ailments. The study also found that the water in the city of Jerusalem, which is "harder" than the water in the country, has a lower incidence of heart ailments. Marine officers threaten to widen Tarshish strike

By YACOV FRIEDLER

Jerusalem Post Correspondent

HAIFA. — The Marine Officers Union prepared itself yesterday to widen its strike against the kibbutz-owned Tarshish company "throughout the merchant marine, if necessary," union leaders told The Post. Following consultations with Secretary Capt. Yehayahu Groman, who had been absent at sea, they warned that if Tarshish would not settle their pay claims with them shortly, they would extend the strike. This put paid to the hopes in some circles that Capt. Groman might moderate the union's stand on his return. Groman and his colleague, Adam Chisik, said they felt that Tarshish was not going it alone, but had the tacit backing of Zim and other shipping companies, as well as the establishment, which they said, is backing Kibbutz Menahem. They may well be testing our steadfastness, and we shall show them that we stand unshaken," Groman and Chisik said. The union heads reiterated that their demands were "perfectly reasonable" and "all we ask that Tarshish honour the labour agreement, including paying the roughly million pounds we reckon they owe their ships' officers in back pay following years of underpayment."

If Tarshish attempted to withhold pay for the time of the strike, now in its fourth week, the officers said, the worst came to the worst, and Tarshish closed down. They would insist that Zim take over the operation of Tarshish's four ships, which in any case were already chartered by Zim on long-term contracts. Capt. Groman also said that the union would not stop its strike of the Zim coaster Hanna, "until Zim gives us a written undertaking that it will not charter foreign vessels on the home line if we let the Hanna go." The ship was sold to a Greek buyer, for £1m. last month, but cannot be delivered because of the strike. Meanwhile, Tarshish's fourth ship, the Deror, has arrived in Ashdod, with a cargo from Europe. She was diverted because the Haifa Port management informed Tarshish that she would not be allowed into the port. The management fears that the Deror would be struck in port, leaving her in her berth, as the Pal-Yam and Palmach have been for over three weeks. The company's fourth vessel, Eshkol, is anchored outside Haifa, port, with a cargo of imports not allowed to enter by the port management.

Book says Kissinger set diplomacy 'back 300 years'

Jerusalem Post Correspondent

LONDON. — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's personalized diplomacy has set "diplomatic practice back 300 years," and made the "foreign policy apparatus as useless as a veriform appendix," according to a former top State Department official. George Ball, Under-Secretary of State during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, made the charges, and many others against Kissinger, in his book, "Diplomacy for a Crowded World," published here by The Bodley Head. In the book, Ball likens Kissinger to a juggler trying to keep too many balls in the air. "Kissinger, the virtuoso, always takes the stage's centre, in the spotlight."

(He) specializes in trying to throw one or two balls at a time to record heights, while letting the rest ricochet aimlessly about the stage." Kissinger, Ball says, "is a tactician without a strategy," who spends his time dealing with the "crisis of the month, letting everything else slide." The Secretary of State, Ball adds, tries to be "both foreign minister and diplomatic corps," making ambassadors little more than briefcase-carriers. The Egypt-Israel Sinai agreement, according to Ball, "bears the unique Kissinger imprimatur." It was primarily intended to buy time, he says, and "by avoiding the tough issues has created a situation of inherent instability."

Six injured in Tiberias crashes

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TIBERIAS. — Six persons were injured yesterday morning in two accidents on the highway leading into the city from the west, which is called "Death Road" by local residents. At 5:30 yesterday morning, a truck heavily laden with corn crashed into the courtyard of the police station. Workmen had to be called in to extricate the driver, Yehia Hajami, from the crushed cabin. Hajami was taken to hospital with a badly crushed leg. Police asked the driver why he had not stopped to have his brakes checked at a police post at the entrance to the city. He said that he had discovered his brakes had failed before he got to the post, and by then he had gathered so much speed that he could not slow down. He decided to run the truck against the earth mound set up for this purpose in the police yard. Half an hour later, a light pickup truck carrying workers overturned in a ditch at Poriya junction. Five men were slightly injured. Police experts believe that the post at which vehicles have their brakes checked before entering the dangerous downhill road into town must be set up further west. MAGEN DAVID ADOM is inaugurating its new first-aid centre in Neve Ya'acov in Jerusalem tomorrow. The new centre, built at a cost of £12.5m, — contributed by donors from Chicago — will serve the new northern quarters of Jerusalem and the Atarot airport and industrial zone.

TEL AVIV. — The first round of the European Basketball Cup for men begins tonight with Maccabi Tel Aviv facing last year's Greek champions Olympiakos, in Athens. The game starts at 7 p.m. Israel time and will be broadcast live from Greece. The Greek team, which includes at least three Greek-Americans, is expected to give the Israelis a tough battle before the highly partisan Greek fans. If the Maccabi players can keep cool under the expected pressure they have a better than even chance of coming out on top. Maccabi has two additions this year, which should strengthen the squad. Aulcie Perry, a towering 2.17 metres, is an excellent pivot man who is expected to shore up both rebounding and defence. Micky Berkowitz has rejoined Maccabi after a year of studying and playing at the University of Nevada in Las Vegas. These two, with Kim Bost-wright, Lou Silver and Bob Griffin, should be in Maccabi's opening five.

GIANTS CLASH

TEL AVIV. — Giants of the National League — Beersheba Hapoel and Tel Aviv Maccabi — clash in the Negev capital on Saturday.

Pundits rate these teams as the best this season, and both won away matches last week. Tel Aviv Maccabi outplayed Jerusalem Beitar last week, thanks to a great mid-field performance by Yaron Oz and a fine pivot's game by Avi Cohen. The goals were snapped up by Tabak and Yehuda Gargir, and Vicky Peretz also played an effective role in attack. A repeat of that performance will stretch the Beersheba defence. This promises to be one of the most interesting games so far this season, and the teams may well split the points. Few people would have expected Ramat Gan Hakoah to be top of the league, but that is where they are. They play on Saturday at Katamon in Jerusalem, where Hapoel return to their home ground after a 3-1 beating by Tel Aviv Hapoel last week. Turjeman, Tashma, Mariki and Co. will have to regain the form which enabled them to beat Beersheba Hapoel in the season's opener if they are to score a home win over Hakoah, where Dror Barzani and Moshe Yehiel are potential goal-getters. The two teams who have failed so far to score a league goal this season are Tel Aviv Shimon and Jerusalem Beitar. They face each other this Saturday and will be out to erase those blanks in the "Goals for" column. Certainly both clubs have the players to get goals and win games, and the result will depend on which eleven can find its form first. Tel Aviv Beitar and Tel Aviv Hapoel will play their derby game at the Bloomfield Stadium. Both are improved teams this season, with Beitar strengthened by several useful pre-season acquisitions from other clubs. Shmuel Rosenthal, in particular, has set his stamp on the Beitar midfield. For Hapoel, Rifai Turk is in great form, and this is another game that may well result in a splitting of points. Both the newcomers to the National League, Yehud and Acre Hapoel, play in away games. They have done equally well in their national team debuts, and visit two off-form teams in Kfar Sava Hapoel and Petah Tikva Maccabi, who occupy the last two places in the league. This Saturday's matches in Tel Aviv and Petah Tikva may not produce the best football of the week, but there is likely to be a scramble for points, and home ground advantage could be crucial. One of the best games of the day is likely to develop in Netanya, where Spiegler, Machness and Co. are at home to Haifa Maccabi, 4-0 winners over Kfar Sava Hapoel last week. Netanya Maccabi are a much stronger home side than when playing away, and no team can take it easy against them. Three persons got all 13 games marked up correctly on their Sportoto football pool last week, though there was not a draw result among them. Each collected about £1,300,000. Twelve results right were worth £14,750, eleven correct earned cheques for £1,655 and ten results won £124. A total of £1.3 million was risked last week, and prize money after this week's games will be a minimum of £1.1 million, including half a million as top prize money, for getting 13 games right.

TEL AVIV. — Competitors from nine foreign countries are taking part in the third annual Israel International Championship Regatta, which opened here yesterday. Sponsor of the four-day event is the Yachting Committee of the Israel Sports Federation. Countries taking part are the U.S., Canada, Holland, Spain, Italy, England, France, Australia, and West Germany. Finals will be held on Saturday afternoon. All classes of sailing ships are to be represented, including yachts from the U.S., Canada and England. There are also two boats from Spain with all-girl crews. The majority of the boats will be competing on a 14.5 km. triangular course just off the newly-inaugurated marina near Gordon Beach. The opening ceremonies yesterday were held in conjunction with the official opening of the municipally-owned marina. A PAVILION commemorating the "illegal immigration" activities, which brought 250,000 Holocaust survivors to this country between 1945-48, was opened at the Ohela Institute on the shores of Lake Kinneret this week.

Cincinnati Reds grab National League crown

CINCINNATI, Ohio. — Ken Griffey chopped a little bouncer toward first base for a bases-loaded single to drive in Cincinnati's third run in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving the Reds a 7-6 comeback triumph Tuesday over the Philadelphia Phillies for their second straight National League baseball championship. The Reds seemed headed for a fourth game. Then, with Lightning suddenness, their big bats exploded. George Foster and Johnny Bench, the first two batters in the ninth, crashed massive home runs to left field and the game was tied. With the three-game sweep of the best-of-five series, the Reds became the first team in the National League to achieve that feat twice in a row. They did it last year by taking three straight from Pittsburgh, then beat Boston in a dramatic seven-game world series. In New York, clutch doubles by Thurman Munson and Elliott Maddox keyed a comeback rally and Chris Chambliss drove in three runs — two of them with a booming homer — as the New York Yankees bounced from behind for a 5-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals in the third game of the American League championship series. The victory gave the Yankees a 2-1 edge in the best-of-five series. (AP)

THERE'S MORE TASTE IN BUTTER. NATURALLY.

Butter does not live by bread alone. Every woman knows the difference between cakes baked with butter and other cakes. And every good housewife knows how the good taste of fresh butter transforms everyday dishes into delicacies: soups; spaghetti; fish; sauces; spreads; hors d'oeuvres and of course, cakes; cookiest custards; whipped desserts and ice cream. Butter is naturally better. So foods prepared with butter taste better, naturally. Try these recipes and taste the difference. Butter. Not more fattening. But a lot tastier. Bon appetite.

Rhodesian nationalist names team for talks

SALISBURY. — Black nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo yesterday named an 18-man negotiating team for the British-sponsored Geneva conference on Rhodesia, despite London's apparent refusal to accede to his demand to postpone the meeting by two weeks.

The team includes two white lawyers and a coloured (mixed race) Rhodesian as well as trusted aides in his moderate faction of the ANC (African National Council) that opposes the ANC faction led by Bishop Abel Muzorewa.

Muzorewa spent yesterday closeted with his officials, determining a delegation for Geneva that ANC sources said might include the extreme leftwing Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, pointedly omitted from British Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland's list of invitees.

Nkomo said he would leave for Nairobi, Kenya, at the weekend for another round of talks with Robert Mugabe, the Mozambique-based Rhodesian nationalist who claims leadership of some 10,000 black guerrillas operating on Rhodesia's eastern border with Marxist-ruled Mozambique.

Mugabe was invited by Crosland to attend the conference which begins with a preliminary round of talks on October 21 before the opening proper on October 25. Last week Nkomo and Mugabe announced they would jointly lead their two delegations — a merger that united extreme and moderate factions in the nationalist movement but excluded Muzorewa.

Mugabe and Nkomo have demanded the conference be postponed for two weeks and also insisted on the release of all political prisoners in Rhodesia. They said Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith should go to the conference only as "an extension of the U.K. delegation."

Neither Crosland nor Smith responded directly to the conditions. And they said they had worked out joint strategy for the conference. (UPI) mechanical parts and people. The blast builds up pressure. We tested it on sheep placed in foxholes and found their innards burst," the film, which was shown in 1972, says.

'Concussion bombs' to Israel

There aren't any jungles in the Mideast, but the fuel-air explosive could be used to detonate an enemy minefield, making a safe path through the mines as well as against equipment and personnel.

The Fir (Forward-Looking Infra-Red) heat-sensitive system is like a television camera that can see at night. A screen shows objects defined by the heat they give off, and which is picked up by the camera. Fir was initially developed for use in aircraft but can now be used by ground troops as well.

The number to be supplied of these new weapons could not be determined. The total cost is between $100m. and $150m.

The fuel-air explosive is one of a family of bombs called Cluster Bomb Units (CBUs). In the past, Israel has been allowed to purchase some less powerful CBUs, but only with the restriction that the weapons not be used against civilian populations.

Sources said on Tuesday that another item in the new equipment Israel will get is more than 120 M-60 tanks.

Informed sources in the government said on Tuesday that the decision to supply the arms was made on in the White House on Friday, without the usual discussion and examination within the executive branch. One source said the decision was "taken in a vacuum as a last attempt to do something after the debate."

(Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter had charged during his Wednesday foreign policy debate with Ford that the President was not giving enough support to Israel.)

By law, Congress must be notified of all foreign sales of military equipment worth more than $25m. Congress then has 30 days in which it can disapprove the sale.

Congress had not been notified of the new equipment for Israel as of late Tuesday. Since Congress has adjourned until January 4, congressional staffers said the 30 days would run out without there being any chance of opposition should the Administration give formal notice of the sale soon.

Because the notification process has no provision for congress to act when it is on an extended holiday, congressional staffers asked the Administration more than a month before the October 22 adjournment for advance word of any arms sales that might come up during the next quarter, a congressional staffer said on Tuesday.

"We thought we had a general idea on all the big stuff coming up and they never mentioned a big one for Israel," he said.

The new items will not increase the total of $1,000m. in military arms credits for Israel in the present fiscal year, presidential press secretary Ron Nessen said on Monday. Israel, therefore, is going to cut back on its orders for some older weapons to get the new ones.

Will aid Soviet Jews emigrate, Ford pledges

NEW YORK. — "We must do better in terms of Soviet Jewish emigration," President Gerald Ford reportedly told a group of more than 150 Jewish community leaders on Tuesday during a closed-door meeting at the Centre for Holocaust Studies of the Yeshiva of Flatbush High School.

The meeting, from which the press was excluded, came after Ford addressed about 3,000 persons outside the school. Students in the crowd jeered and interrupted him with cries of "Save Soviet Jewry" and "Ford runs on Arab oil." (An earlier report of the meeting appeared in yesterday's Jerusalem Post.)

According to an observer at the meeting, Ford acknowledged that the rate of Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union has declined from 25,000 to 12,000 a year and hinted that this was the result of a breakdown in communications between Washington and Moscow because of restrictions imposed by the Jackson-Vanik and Stevenson amendments to the trade reform act.

According to the observer, Ford said "as soon as possible I will work with the legislators to change, amend and enact legislation which will now have caused some problems." The President then reportedly added, "We must strengthen Israel, not only with money and arms, but also with people who are fully committed to the preservation of Israel and who will do so through their immigration to Israel."

Questioned about a possible future Arab oil boycott, Ford declared, "I think there is a boycott. I will not tolerate it." But he added, according to the observer, there will not be another Arab oil embargo because "there will not be another war in the Middle East."

On the subject of the Arab boycott of American firms doing business with Israel, Ford referred to his recent order to the Commerce Department to release, in the future, the names of U.S. companies that comply with Arab boycott demands. He said any violation of his order would result in action and claimed that his administration is "the only one to have taken positive action in the area of the boycott." (JTA)

Ford played unwitting role in Watergate coverup: Dean

WASHINGTON. — Former White House counsel John W. Dean said yesterday that President Ford had a role — although probably an unwitting one — in the early stages of the Watergate coverup.

Dean said the incident occurred during September and October, 1972, when the White House was seeking to block a pre-election investigation into Watergate by the late Wright Patman's House Banking and Currency Committee. President Richard Nixon, according to the White House tapes, directed that then-House Minority Leader Gerald Ford be enlisted to help block Patman's probe.

It was not clear at the time, nor from Dean's just-published book on Watergate, whether Nixon's instructions were carried out or whether Ford actually discussed the matter with the Nixon White House.

At his confirmation hearings for vice president in 1973, Ford swore he had not talked to Nixon, chief of staff H.R. Haldeman, domestic aide John D. Ehrlichman or Dean about stopping the Patman hearings. But Ford added he was in almost daily contact with White House lobbyists, although he did not recall discussing the matter with any of them.

Dean, in an interview broadcast nationally, said one of those lobbyists, Dick Cook, did talk to Ford about the Patman strategy and reported back to him on its progress. "I can recall Dick coming back and telling, for example, how Jerry was going to call a meeting of the minority members ... and really tell them what they should do on the day of the vote and how they should hold together," Dean said.

Ford did not deny in his confirmation hearings that he sought to block the Patman inquiry. But he said he did so on his own initiative, and not at the behest of the White House.

The National Broadcasting Company, which conducted the interview, quoted Cook, now with the Lockheed Aircraft Corp., as saying: "Despite John Dean's repeated and frantic requests, I never spoke with Mr. Ford about the need to deny Mr. Patman's request for subpoena power." The issue on which the investigation eventually was killed.

Dean was asked whether he thought Ford knew about the ongoing coverup when he helped block the Congressional investigation. "I don't think that anybody had briefed Mr. Ford or that Mr. Ford had any intimate knowledge as to what was going on," Dean said. "I think it was very clear that the White House didn't want this investigation going on just before an election." (AP)

'Bourgeois reactionary' Li see jumping to top in China

By JAY MATTHEWS
The Washington Post

HONGKONG. — In the most far-reaching leadership crisis in China in the last 10 years, Vice Premier Li Hsien-Nien, once a target of radical attack, appears to have stepped into the role of chief economic planner and foreign policy leader once filled by his old patron Chou En-Lai.

Branded a "bourgeois reactionary" by Red Guards during the Cultural Revolution, Li kept his post as Finance Minister only through the intervention of Chou. With four top radical leaders who inspired the Red Guards now reportedly under arrest, Li appears for the time being to have assumed a position almost as important as Chou's, although Hua Kuo-Feng retains the title of premier and the leadership situation is far from certain.

Assuming that the four radicals have indeed been removed from power, Li would stand third in the party, with only the new Chairman, Hua, and Defence Minister Yeh Chien-Ying, 78 and thought to be in semi-retirement, ahead of him.

Until the reports about the purge of the radicals, Li officially was ranked seventh in the Communist party hierarchy. But he was called on Tuesday night to preside at a banquet for visiting head of state Michael Somare of Papua-New Guinea, a role usually performed only by China's premier.

Born in central Hupei province, Li, now 69, was apprenticed as a carpenter in his youth. His origins sometimes revealed in an earthy style and crude manner, according to those who have met him, but he has mastered the intricacies of the Chinese budget and has made himself indispensable as an economic planner.

Li is reported to have been critical of Chairman Mao's more ambitious efforts to collectivize the Chinese economy rapidly, such as during the great leap forward of the late 1950s. In the early 1960s, he supported efforts to reintroduce material incentives for workers in Chinese factories and on farms, thus drawing the wrath of party radicals who felt such devices were leading China toward a new elite.

As a consequence, during the late 1960s, Li was forced to attend several "self criticism" sessions. With his usual love for contradictory advice, Mao advised Li against surrendering to the young radicals, whom Mao had been urging to assault government figures.

According to a document from the Cultural Revolution period, Mao told Li in 1966: "Mothers used to educate children, but children are now educating mothers. I think you are somewhat lacking in spirit. If they will not listen to your argument, you must argue just the same."

Li was concerned almost entirely with Huipei domestic matters before his transfer to the capital in 1954, but after that he became increasingly involved in foreign affairs and was, at various times, thought to be on the verge of becoming foreign minister. In the decade from 1964 to 1969, he was abroad on six occasions, visiting Albania, three times, Mongolia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania.

He also accompanied Mao on a critical trip to Moscow in 1957 to take part in the 40th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution. During a period from 1959 to November 1962, Li was a signatory for China to the treaties, agreements, protocols and joint communiques dealing with international commercial matters.

According to a colleague, not a study in a university or any kind of higher education member of the Communist Party, Li began to work in the peasantry in and around Hupei in 1926 and helped an effective army guerrilla fight there.

When Communist forces were eventually forced to retreat, Li was a minor official in the war. In 1935, the Communist Li belonged to there began a march.

In 1964, Li was called to replace Teng Hsiao-ping as premier of Finance, a post he ever since. He was elected ruling Politburo in 1966 served on that body longer of its other 14 active members. Li is married to Lin Chao-ling, a minor official in the health ministry in the mid-1950s, then moved to the finance staff office to work for her and was, at various times, thought to be on the verge of becoming foreign minister. In the decade from 1964 to 1969, he was abroad on six occasions, visiting Albania, three times, Mongolia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania.

Li was reported to be at the Sunday to greet Somare on val and also at the ban

Tories display party unity, but still have to woo British voters

By MARK SEGAL
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

LONDON. — The Conservative Party has emerged from its annual conference in Brighton in a state of apparent unity and claiming that electoral victory is theirs for the asking. The trouble is that despite a first-class political performance by party leader Margaret Thatcher and her colleagues, her move to 10 Downing Street is not just around the corner.

Premier James Callaghan is hardly likely to seek an early election after the disunity and division displayed at the Labour Party's conference in Blackpool the previous week. The public burying of the feud between Mrs. Thatcher and former party leader Edward Heath gave the Tories their much-needed opportunity of parading their united ranks, on TV screens throughout the land, thus driving home the comparison with the noisy scenes from Blackpool where the left-wing captured the Labour Party.

This partly explains the euphoria of some Tories who are angry at having been deprived of power which they feel is theirs by heritage. Heath gave what is regarded as the finest speech at the conference, and he made delegates happy when he indicated that he might even serve in a Thatcher cabinet. The former premier has considerable support in his party, although many still blame him for having forced the early elections in 1974, quite unnecessarily (the Tories had a majority), and losing to Labour.

The Tories naturally stressed the worsening economic crisis and argued that it was all Labour's fault and that they could rectify everything — if given a chance.

Yet they are faced with two problems — how to lay the ghost of a continual confrontation with the trade unions if they return to power, and whether to support any emergency measures the Callaghan government might introduce. They appear to be trying to tackle the former and it is a long-term target. But the latter issue faces them this week as Parliament ends its recess. If Labour's left-wing should desert the Callaghan government, should the Tories step in the breach to back these measures needed to save the economy? The answer poses an additional dilemma because by so doing they would perpetuate an administration they hotly oppose. Yet if they fail to support these measures, Callaghan could then accuse them of putting party interests before those of the nation. Mrs. Thatcher has tried to leave her options open and the Tories are already demanding that the government drop important bills as the price for their support.

Party unity was facilitated by modifying the ultra-rightist views of Mrs. Thatcher's policy adviser, Sir Keith Joseph, and producing a more pragmatic party programme acceptable to all wings. For the opposition party is now intent on attaining a modus-vivendi with the unions, in contrast to Heath's bid to smash them. The Tories now seek to woo the unions — if not away from the Labour Party, then at least into a neutral position should Mrs. Thatcher move to 10 Downing Street.

Shadow employment secretary Jim Prior dismayed some Tory delegates by saying he would not oppose the unions' "closed shop" demand if he were in government. This is a major shift in Conservative attitudes and a clever tactic in persuading voters that the Tories would not plunge Britain into one strike after another, as under the former Tory governments.

This indicates how the Conservatives have moved away from their old anti-union stances, as on a whole series of issues which were once considered the monopoly of Labour.

The country's mood may be leaning away from Labour, and the Tories can gain encouragement from the electoral changes in Sweden and West Germany. However, they still have to persuade the majority of voters that their policies create more unemployment than to business and property tests.

Labour's left-wing may be the job for the Tories by the latest internal Labour fight with the organization's permanent staff up in arms at the appointment of a declared list as the national youth or "Trofs" (as they are termed stealthily infiltrated the party at various levels.

The call for a national "best men of all party" has been raised again. Folicia Heath was even named as capable of restoring inter-party confidence. But coalition, a dirty word in the Labour vocabulary, evoking memories of the "great betrayal" in the war when Ramsay MacDonald left Labour Party and formed a national government. The party of coalition-makers are, therefore, the majority for such a move.

government won at the Party assembly. If the Tories get out from under steering and get desperate then pressure mount for such a change. The highly doubtful that the Party under Callaghan's leadership would tolerate such a split, party would split and that thing Callaghan could never

'Two more Soviet nuclear tests'

WASHINGTON. — The Soviet Union has detonated two more underground nuclear blasts that may have exceeded the 150-kiloton limit negotiated with the U.S. Ford Administration officials said on Tuesday.

The two explosions, on August 27 at the Semipalatinsk test site in the central part of the country and on September 28 at the Novaya Zamiya test site in the Arctic, were sure by U.S. monitoring of a range stretching above and 150-kilotons, officials said.

Two earlier underground tests on July 4 and July 25 also recorded by U.S. bases in range the cold place, either above or below the limit, according to statements from President Gerald Ford.
